Expressionism: Dyer's painting 'The Great Day' (1911) is a masterpiece of the movement, characterized by its bold, expressive brushstrokes and vibrant colors. The painting depicts a scene of intense emotional turmoil, with figures in a state of distress and confusion. The use of perspective is distorted, creating a sense of disorientation and highlighting the psychological state of the characters. The overall composition is dynamic and energetic, reflecting the artist's inner world and the turbulent times in which he lived.
